Learning in the Early Years

- independent access to open ended resources,
- experienced practitioner observations and interactions,
- extending learning through play,
- unlimited access to both indoor and outdoor environments,
- worship time for reflection and learning about God's love for us,
- use of open-ended questioning and communication.

Provide lots of opportunities for children's natural curiosity to manifest itself. With very young children, our role is one of supporter and guide.

— Lilian Katz —

Children have real understanding only of that which they invent themselves.

Jean Piaget

Play is the highest form of research

Albert Einstein

“Children learn as they play. Most importantly, in play children learn how to learn.”

O. Fred Donaldson

We use an online platform for our observations and assessments of learning. You will be able to log in and see your child's learning and development. We also ask that you upload pictures, comments and videos of your child achieving at home.

Daily habits to get into...

- Book bags should come to school every day.
- You need to check bags every day as letters from the office, or messages about non-serious injuries, will be sent home in the bags.

We look forward to welcoming
